

Frederick Douglass Teaching Scholars Fellowship - Application

The Frederick Douglass Institute (FDI) is committed to building and maintaining diverse, equitable, and inclusive environments where all students, faculty, and staff can thrive. FDI Teaching Scholars are central to these efforts, which are aligned with the State System's strategic priorities, including increasing faculty, student, and staff diversity. Since 1999, State System institutions have welcomed dozens of graduate students who are pursuing careers as university faculty while entering the final year of terminal-degree and doctoral programs. The FDI is a network of scholars who deliver forward-thinking initiatives that promote inclusive excellence and enhanced access and success. Thank you for your interest in the FDI Teaching Scholars Fellowships. Your information will be shared with university provosts and others as appropriate. In the interim, please visit www.passhe.edu/fdi to learn about the innovative programs across the State System's ten universities. Please contact DEI@passhe.edu if you have questions.
